

I find it disappointing that in this time of economic uncertainty and small business pressures the FCC is considering adding to the problem, not the solution. I am confident that further investigative research will clearly point to the Internet as a whole represents much more than simply an Information Service.